Public Trust & Nuffield Scholarship Wednesday August 24th at 11am EDT

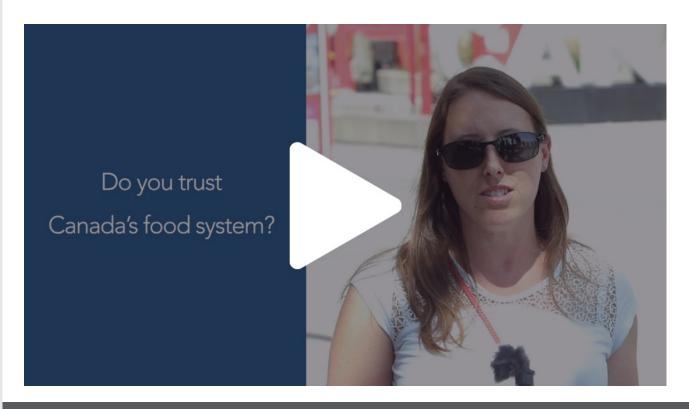

Mark Phillips is a 2022 Canadian Nuffield Scholar in the midst of researching his chosen topic of Public Trust in Agriculture. Growing up on a potato and beef farm in the agriculturally-driven province of Prince Edward Island, he is alarmed by the growing disconnect between our farms and the general public and, in some cases, the distrust in how we grow our food. Mark is examining how farmers and the public can work together to improve public trust.

Join Mark as he talks about the Nuffield program and gives a midway update of his findings while sharing his experiences of travelling through Belgium, the Netherlands, the United Kingdom, and Ireland, as well as where his travels will take him next.
